AMRUM

"Amrum" is a deeply moving and poignant historical drama about a 12-year-old boy who, in the shadow of the fading German regime, discovers the true enemy is far closer than he imagined.

This film is based on the true events of its screenwriter, Hark Bohm's childhood on the German island of Amrum during the last months of World War II.

"A visually striking tale of a childhood spent during wartime and on the wrong side of history, hitting all the right emotional beats while still having something interesting to say".
